NEW QUESTION: 1

Which level of RAID is commonly referred to as disk mirroring?

- A. RAID 5
- B. RAID 1
- C. RAID 3
- D. RAID 0

Answer: B

Explanation:

Redundant Array of Inexpensive Disks (RAID) is a method of enhancing hard disk fault tolerance, which can improve performance (see Table A.8). RAID 1 maintains a complete copy of all data by duplicating each hard drive. Performance can suffer in some implementations of RAID 1, and twice as many drives are required. Novell developed a type of disk mirroring called disk duplexing, which uses multiple disk controller cards increasing both performance and reliability.

*RAID 0, gives some performance gains by striping the data across multiple drives, but reduces fault tolerance, as the failure of any single drive disables the whole volume.

*RAID 3, uses a dedicated error-correction disk called a parity drive, and stripes the data across the other data drives.

*RAID 5 uses all disks in the array for both data and error correction, increasing both storage capacity and performance.

NEW QUESTION: 2

Ihr Netzwerk enthält eine Active Directory-Domäne mit dem Namen contoso.com. Die Domäne enthält drei VLANs. Die VLANs werden wie in der folgenden Tabelle gezeigt konfiguriert.

Auf allen Clientcomputern wird entweder Windows 7 oder Windows 8 ausgeführt.

NEW QUESTION: 4

Why does a restore operation need to communicate with the backup server?

- A. Locate the data to be restored using the backup catalog
- B. Determine the RTO of the backup save set
- C. Run the restore automatically according to a schedule
- D. Determine the RPO of the backup save set

Answer: A

Explanation:

Recovery Operation

After the data is backed up, it can be restored when required. A restore process must be manually initiated from the client. Some backup software has a separate application for restore operations. These restore applications are usually accessible only to the administrators or backup operators. Figure on the slide depicts a restore operation. Upon receiving a restore request, an administrator opens the restore application to view the list of clients that have been backed up. While selecting the client for which a restore request has been made, the administrator also needs to identify the client that will receive the restored data. Data can be restored on the same client for whom the restore request has been made or on any other client. The administrator then selects the data to be restored and the specified point in time to which the data has to be restored based on the RPO. Because all this information comes from the backup catalog, the restore application needs to communicate with the backup server. The backup server instructs the appropriate storage node to mount the specific backup media onto the backup device. Data is then read and sent to the client that has been identified to receive the restored data.

Some restorations are successfully accomplished by recovering only the requested production data. For example, the recovery process of a spreadsheet is completed when the specific file is restored. In database restorations, additional data, such as log files, must be restored along with the production data. This ensures consistency for the restored data. In these cases, the RTO is extended due to the additional steps in the restore operation. EMC E10-001 Student Resource Guide. Module 10: Backup and Archive
